1.	INS Investigation Files, ca. 1948-85, 6 cu.ft. Records consist of investigations into individuals and organizations and relate to their presence in or attempts or potential attempts to enter the United States. Included are investigations of Soviet-bloc seamen, to see if they had communist affiliations; data on travel restrictions for visiting Soviet-bloc scientists; materials on possible Nazis in the Boston area; departure control and lookout lists for people entering and leaving the country; and data on a wide variety of alleged subversive organizations, including Cubans, Central Americans, South Africans, Hungarians, and Iranians. Also included is a list of informants, mostly former communists, some of whom had given testimony at HUAC hearings. Much of the material should be protected for some period of time. The records contain both evidential value, on the investigatory functions of the INS and how they were accomplished, and historical value, on the groups and individuals being investigated, and as a reflection of this period of American history.
