Federal Aviation Administration Suspected Unapproved Parts Program Office, AVR-20 Investigative Case Files Job No. N1-237-02-2 Page 2 of 3

The National Suspected Unapproved Parts (SUP) Program Office addresses the issues surrounding aircraft parts suspected of not meeting regulatory requirements. The office was created to develop and disseminate policy and procedures for the FAA, as well as develop and implement inspector training for SUP investigations. The office serves as a primary collection point of notifications to the FAA regarding suspect parts. The office provides technical support to FAA and industry regarding SUP; maintains an automated information system for tracking SUP notifications and investigations and analyzing data; and provides program oversight and review of SUP related enforcement actions and audits. SUP Investigations are conducted by the FAA to identify and address unapproved parts that do not meet the requirements of the Code of Federal Regulations Title 14 parts 21, 43 and 91.

Investigative Case Files contain investigative materials pertaining to a SUP case and may include Suspected Unapproved Parts Notifications (FAA Form 8120-11 or its equivalent); photographs; notes; copies of records obtained during the investigation; witness statements as applicable; documented interviews, briefing papers, records of telephone conversations and meetings; formal agency letters and memorandums, correspondence by entities under investigation containing responses to allegations; copies of e-mail messages with various interested parties requesting information, relaying information, describing issues, and summarizing discussions; copies of Airworthiness Directives, Unapproved Parts Notifications, or other Field Notifications drafted or issued (including Unapproved Parts Notifications, Flight Standards Information Bulletins, and Aviation Maintenance Alerts); information about the procedures implemented to remove the unapproved parts from the system; and Suspected Unapproved Parts Case Closure Guide (FAA Form 8120-13 or its equivalent). When parts are obtained during the course of an investigation, the action office completes and files an Aircraft/Parts Identification and Release (FAA Form 8020-2 or its equivalent) and a Chain of Custody Receipt (FAA Form 1600-70 or its equivalent) for all parts received.

All investigative case files also contain SUP Status Reports (FAA Form 8120-12 or its equivalent) This form contains information about all aspects of the case including the SUP case number, case start and close dates, names of law enforcement authorities involved, description of the SUP event/complaint, information about the company being investigated, information about the suspected unapproved part, corresponding EIR number(s), and a closeout synopsis outlines what the issues were, what the findings were, and what action was taken to address the findings. Each case file may contain several updated copies of this form. The office currently prints and files a copy of the report each time information is added to it and then prints and files the finalized version

This series of records also includes files for resolved SUP notifications. These are notifications the FAA received but which did not provide sufficient information to show an investigation was warranted.

This Records Disposition Authority expands Item No. 8122 in the Federal Aviation Administration's Records Organization, Transfer, and Destruction Standards manual.
