34. Project Files, 1953-61. 5 cubic feet. Arranged alphabetically by hospital or health care facility.

Specifications, blueprints, correspondence, and requirements for equipping and stockpiling emergency hospitals, health and medical facilities, on a nationwide basis. The records, from 1953, relate to compliance with FCDA regulations on hospital construction or applications for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC) through FCDA. Under the Federal Defense Act of 1950, FCDA could allocate civil defense money through other agencies including RFC. However, FCDA had to approve the loan, and if the hospital was going to be built in a "target" area, FCDA requirements such as reinforced concrete and fire prevention measures had to be met.

Several files document a local/state-Federal bureaucratic battle, as some hospitals requested waivers of protective construction requirements, even enlisting Governors and Congressmen to plead their case. On the FCDA side, the records document how the agency reacted when challenged on a basic part of the "National Plan for Civil Defense," adequate health care facilities for post-attack target areas.
