Background Information

NARA operates Presidential libraries for administrations dating back to President Herbert Hoover (March 1929 - March 1933). As of the start of President Ronald Reagan's term in office (January 20, 1981 - January 20, 1989), the Presidential Records Act (PRA) of 1978 (44 U.S.C. 2201-2209, as amended), has governed records created by the President, Vice President, their immediate staffs, and units or individuals of the Executive Office of the President and Office of the Vice President whose function is to advise and assist the President and the Vice President respectively. NARA's regulations for implementing the PRA are found in 36 CFR Part 1270. As of the date of this proposed records schedule, the PRA statute applies to records at the "PRA" libraries for four former Presidents (Reagan, George H. W. Bush, William J. Clinton, and George W. Bush) and the incumbent President (Barack H. Obama), as well as to records of former Vice Presidents George H.W Bush, Dan Quayle, Albert Gore, and Richard Cheney.

In accordance with the PRA, NARA's Presidential Materials Division (LM) must formally notify representatives of the incumbent President and relevant former President before Presidential records may be released to the public. The same procedures are followed for proposed disclosures of Vice-Presidential records whereby a representative of the pertinent former Vice President is also formally notified. LM sends formal letters to the representatives, notifying them of Presidential/Vice-Presidential records proposed for opening following a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) access request or completion of a systematic processing project. The PRA allows representatives of the incumbent President, former President, and former Vice President (for Vice-Presidential records only) 60 working days (with one 30-working day extension option) in which to determine if the incumbent President or former President plan(s) to assert a claim of executive privilege. Representatives may respond to LM to officially release the records, or not respond to the notification and simply let the 60-day time period elapse, thereby automatically releasing the records at the end of the time period.

Pursuant to 44 U.S.C. 2205, a court of competent jurisdiction, the incumbent President (if needed for conduct of current business), and either House of Congress or a congressional committee or subcommittee can request access to Presidential and Vice-Presidential records in NARA's legal custody that are not yet available to the public. If documents responsive to these "special access" requests are located, LM provides notice to representatives of the former President and Vice President (for Vice-Presidential records only), as well as the incumbent President (if request is from a court or Congress). Representatives of the former President and incumbent President (as applicable) are given 30 calendar days in which to invoke a claim of executive privilege. The time frame may be less than 30 days depending upon the circumstances of the special access request (per 36 CFR 1270.46[d]). If representatives do not respond to LM by the specified date, NARA discloses the records to the requester.

cases when: (1) a claim of executive privilege has been made; or (2) requested Presidential/Vice-Presidential records pertain to notable persons or subjects in American government, culture, and/or history. Notable persons may hold/have held high-level positions in the executive, legislative, and/or judicial branches at [the] federal and/or state levels. For example, public release and special access notifications may concern Presidential/Vice-Presidential records regarding high-ranking advisors and nominees for Cabinet positions and Supreme Court Justices. Noteworthy subjects in Presidential/Vice-Presidential records may cover significant one-time events (e.g., landmark court cases), commissions of high importance (e.g., 9/11 Commission), or complex issues in domestic and international affairs (e.g., homeland security, tax reform, environment, Middle East policies) spanning one or more administrations. Prominent notification files have historical value insofar as they document topics of interest in Presidential/Vice-Presidential records dating from more than 25 years ago. This schedule item is not media-neutral because it applies only to paper records.

Presidential Materials Division (LM) Notification Database

Disposition Authority Number DAA-0064-2017-0002-0004

LM maintains a database for tracking public release and special access notification cases pertaining to Presidential and Vice-Presidential records. This database has entries for both temporary notification case files (DAA-0064-2017-0002-0001) and permanent ("prominent") case files (DAA-0064-2017-0002-0002). All cases are assigned a case number. At a minimum, the type of notification (e.g., systematic processing project, FOIA requester, special access requester) and requested materials (pages/electronic files/photographs processed, restricted, and proposed for opening) are included in each entry. LM files print-outs in both the temporary and permanent files for notification cases. This schedule item is not media-neutral because it applies only to electronic records.
