1.	Public Dockets Records documenting Commission proceedings and actions taken on applications for rights and benefits, rulemakings, and complaints. A docket is established for each Commission proceeding and is the official record of the proceeding. A docket often contains an application or complaint, protests, hearing transcripts and briefs, memoranda, reports, exceptions, petitions, correspondence, and decisions. There are several types of dockets, including: Ex Parte Dockets (EP) and Ex Parte Motor Carrier Dockets (EPHC) - Proceedings of general interest to the transportation industry and those involving rules and regulations. A. Significant Ex Parte Dockets. These are dockets that have been determined by the ICC to (1) cover the most important, unique, controversial, and/or historic cases decided by the agency, and (2) contain substantive documentation of research value that does not appear in the ICC Decisions . The ICC will select these dockets and identify them by
