1. MARSHALL WILSON PHOTO COLLECTION OF THE NORRIS RESERVOIR

This series contains photographs that were taken by Marshall Wilson during 1933-36 in the period just before the Norris reservoir was filled. Mr. Wilson was a TVA employee who worked in the field interviewing and completing forms for families who were being relocated. He made photographs of some of the people and places he saw as part of his job. The collection contains 160 to 200 black and white photographs in two scrapbooks. Negatives have been made of each photograph and there is a print made from the negatives available for review. The photos depict the following that were covered by the Norris reservoir: churches and schools (labeled with name and location), community life, grave removals (names can be seen on tombstones), and individual people (identified).
