INTEGRATED SURVEILLANCE SYSTEM (ISS) AND SUPPORTING ENVIRONMENT

ISS allows the agency to monitor the daily activities of large traders, key price relationships, and relevant supply and demand factors. ISS data enables the agency to analyze the composition of the market, such as the participation in the market by commercial versus non-commercial traders and the open interest held by certain occupational categories. It is also used to detect market anomalies.

ISS collects and processes daily futures and options position data for large traders from reporting firms (futures commission merchants, clearing members, and foreign brokers) and daily open interest, volume, price and clearing member data from exchanges. This data is further supplemented by collecting and processing related cash market price data from a variety of sources. In addition, identifying information concerning each large trader and reportable account is entered and stored in ISS.
