International Monetary Fund Advisory Committee

In October of 1998, Congress passed the Foreign Operations, Export Financing and Related Programs Act, which authorized the U.S. to participate in an increase of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) quota and required the U.S. to aggressively use its voice and vote to advocate a number of measures intended to strengthen the effectiveness of the IMF. Section 610 of the Act states the Secretary of the Treasury "should establish" an International Monetary Fund Advisory Committee to advise the Secretary on the extent to which IMF programs meet policy goals set forth in policy advocacy provisions of the IMF funding legislation. The policy provisions may be broadly categorized as promoting market and trade liberalization, social safety nets and core labor standards, environmental protection, good governance, transparency and anti-corruption efforts.

The Committee operated under provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (FACA), requiring its meetings to be open to the public. It was composed of eight people appointed by the Secretary in consultation with Congress. Members were drawn from outside the government. An understanding with the Hill provided for two representatives from industry, two from finance, two from labor, one each from the environmental and human rights communities. The Committee held a total of 6 day long meetings during which Treasury and/or IMF staff and outside experts made presentations to the members on efforts to implement the reforms. Meetings were held between September 1999 and December 2000. The legislation did not require a report and none was produced. The Committee's charter expired in May 2001.
